So, how do you compare to the rest of the group?
Where do you fit into the geek hierarchy? http://www.brunching.com/geekhierarchy.html

So if you are really a geek you must speak the language.
Let's test you – do you know what the abbreviations mean?
Write down the definitions and discuss.

Now let's watch a video which explains. (Your teacher will give you the link).

OK so for those of you who got all the answers right and are obviously spending too much time on the Internet, maybe you need some help in your social life….

Let's watch a video you can relate to.

Your task is to write down the rules, advice from this video. This is going to be a test of your level of comprehension because the presenter talks quite fast and uses a lot of idioms.

Let's see which of you manages to write down the most advice/rules given in the video.

Here are the idiomatic expressions we heard in the video.

Team challenge – use these words correctly in a sentence.

Sort yourself out	To smarten up.	Dull
Take a good hard look at yourself	Granted	Jock
Bulk up	A chick	Turf
Heifer	Keep it to yourself	To interact
Get a grip!	Grot	To pander to
Buy some proper clothes.	To waffle	To have no shame
	A win win situation	A box set

A geeks guide to….

Write your own rules and advice to, well, anything of your choice. Work with a partner to put together your own guide. (To dating, to chat rooms, to shopping, to doing an internship, to English lessons etc..).

In English we use the following formulas for giving advice:

I don't think you should work so hard.

You ought to work less.

You ought not to work so hard.

If I were you, I'd work less.

If I were in your position, I'd work less.

If I were in your shoes, I'd work less.

You had better work less.

You shouldn't work so hard.

Whatever you do, don't work so hard.
