What would a typical day be like as an Au Pair for your family?

The Hill family of Portland Oregan.

You would wake up at 6:00 in the morning and wake up the girls, Jessie and Angie. You would get them dressed and make them breakfast. At 7:30, you would take the girls to drop off the older girl, Angie, at her school. Then you would be able to do whatever you have planned with Jessie. Just make sure that she eats between noon and 1pm because at 1pm she has to take her hour-long nap. At 2pm, it's up to you, again, to decided what you do. At 3pm, you have to pick up Angie from school and then you would come back here to the house. You would help Angie with her homework and give the girls a snack. Until 6pm, you would give the girls a bath while we prepare dinner. At 8pm, you would put the girls to bed and have the night to do what you want.

What would a typical day be like as an Au Pair for your family?

The Flannery Family of Virginia

You would wake up at 7am and get the girls read for the day: getting dressed, eating breakfast... Since our child, Billy, doesn't go to school, you would spend the entire day with him. It is up to you to decide what y'all do together. He eats lunch at 12:30. He doesn't take naps. We eat dinner at 5:30 so he doesn't need a snack during the day. His bedtime is 8:30, so he needs to have taken his bath before then. After that; you would have free time.

What would a typical day be like as an Au Pair for your family?

The Dornan Family of San Fransisco

You would wake up at 7am and give our three kids their baths. At 7:45 we eat breakfast. Afterwadrs, you would take Jordan to basketball camp at 9am and Rebecca and Peter to piano lessons at 9:30am. You would pick up Jordan at 10am and immediately take him to his dance lessons that start at 10:30. Rebecca and Peter would need picked up at 11am and then you would have to pick up Jordan at 11:30am. At noon you would make lunch and then give Jordan and Rebecca a nap, during which you would teach Peter French. At 1:30pm, you would wake up the kids and take them all to their swimming lessons at 2:15pm. At 4pm, you would drop Peter off at art school and then teach Jordan and Rebecca French. At 5pm you would pick up Peter and at 6pm, you would come back to the house and make dinner for the kids. 8pm is bedtime and you would read them a bedtime story.

What would a typical day be like as an Au Pair for your family?

The Simms family of New York.

A typical day would be fairly easy. Gregory wakes up at 8am and eats breakfast. Then you would give him a bath and take him out to the park nearby. He has swimming lessons at 12:30pm until 2pm. Afterwards, you would make him lunch and give him a nap. Until 5pm you could do whatever you want with him. At 5pm, you can give him a little snack and then at 6:30 we all sit down to dinner. After that, we put him to bed, so you could do whatever you wanted.

What would a typical day be like as an Au Pair for your family?

The Bowman Family of San Diego.

You would wake up the boys at 6:30am and get them ready for the day. At 8am, they have voice lessons and at 10am they have music lessons. You would make them lunch at 12pm and then give the younger one a nap while you help the other boy learn to read English. At 3pm, you would take both of the boys to their friend's house to play and then you would come back and make dinner at 6pm. Around 7:30pm you would give them their baths and then read them a bedtime story – bedtime is at 8:30pm.